

16 March 2004

A review copy of this book is available – please contact ROBERT PEEL with your address details – call 01666 823306 or e-mail robert@market-it.co.uk

Getmapping's aerial map book reveals the history of London

Getmapping's aerial photography forms the basis of a new illustrative book that plots the history of London from Roman times through to the present day. London Revealed, published by Collins, ventures through all aspects of the capital's formation by combining Getmapping's high quality aerial photography with thematic and historical information.

London is perhaps the most complex and multi-layered city in the world. The book provides a fascinating insight, peeling back the layers of 21st-century London and revealing the layers below that have contributed to the London we can see today.

The forum, walls and public buildings of Roman London are shown on one spread overlain on the modern view of the capital, on another the reader can see the locations of the Jack the Ripper murders in Whitechapel; the spread of the Victorian cholera epidemics; important sites in the Dickens novels; the theatres of Shakespearian London, or the effects of the Blitz.

With nearly 90 full-page spreads covering a vast breadth of London subjects, London Revealed is a unique approach to the history of one of the world's greatest cities. The book follows the success of Getmapping London: The Photographic Atlas. This atlas provides stunning aerial views of the capital city in which London's cityscape, its parks, major buildings, roads and individual houses are clear to see.

London Revealed retails at £25.00 and can be purchased online for a discounted price of £19.99 plus P&P from www.getmapping.com/news.

For editorial enquiries, please contact Robert Peel on 01666 823306
Please fax colour separation requests to Robert Peel on fax no. 01666 824668
All reader enquiries to www.getmapping.com/news or call 0870 224 0480